The Foundation for Christian Studies Launches Studychristianity.org

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado, February 12, 2009 – The Foundation for Christian Studies (FCS), a non-profit organization dedicated to the study and awareness of Christian theology, values, and service, today launched its global website at www.studychristianity.org. The FCS website includes a comprehensive doctrinal study program, downloadable theological essays, interactive discussion forums, and online stores for Christian books, music, and art. While the primary mission of the FCS is to encourage the study of Christianity, the FCS also commits itself to supporting outstanding global charities in hopes of inspiring ongoing Christian service.

“The Foundation delivers easy to understand and use Christian study content and interactive discussion platforms for people around the world—regardless of theological differences,” says Eric Shuster, the Foundation’s Founder and Executive Director. “The foundation, an Amazon.com associate, offers a concentrated variety of quality study materials for our website visitors, with the promise of helping some of the world’s best run outreach programs in the process,” says Shuster. The FCS is currently spotlighting Choice Humanitarian, Nurse-Family Partnership, and the Knowledge is Power Program (KIPP) as institutions of excellence that exemplify Christian principles of individual and community self-reliance.

The FCS Board of Advisors includes theological advisors and contributors amassing nearly 200 years of collective Christian doctrinal study, teaching, and service, providing the Foundation with an all-volunteer powerhouse of intellectual and spiritual assets to draw from. The FCS’s online library includes trademarked and copy written content for over 50 doctrines, practices, and principles of Christianity—all available for immediate download and distribution to website visitors.
